HELPING THE NEEDY

Objection is being voiced on all sides against the collection by out of town charities of articles of clothing and other articles for the needy.

The extent that this practice of collection is being carried on was indicated at the council meeting on Monday night when Councilman Marie Ogborn reported that the clothing, shoes and similar articles were being taken out of the city "by the truckload."

As expressed by those who object to the practice of local people giving these things for the needy out-of-town, there is a big market in Richmond for those same articles. Not too large a market, but there are people in Richmond, who are in need of aid and there is not a bona fide reason why those things which might make things easier for them, should be taken to the needy of another city.

It is true that the larger cities probably have more needy in proportion than we have in Richmond. The articles which the more prosperous people discarded that are still suitable for wear should not be obtained by these out-of-town organizations, but by house to house solicitors however.

All such articles should be turned over to the local Social Service Bureau and then if any remain after the local needy are taken care of, those out-of-town organizations who wish to take the overflow should get them direct from the Social Service Bureau.

We have had numerous articles in this column warning against the house to house solicitor and those who are soliciting for this worthy purpose are not to be excepted.

The local law provides that any one soliciting must have a license from the police permitting them to do so. If the person doing the soliciting is honest and above board they will have no objection to going to the police for a permit. If someone calls at your home your first act should be to demand to see a permit. If they have no permit and the cause seems worthy it might be a good plan to tell them that a permit is required in this city. If after you have told them that they must have a permit and they continue to solicit without it, that is your cue to call the police for the chances are about ten to one that the person doing the soliciting is keeping his or her eyes open for something else besides what they pretend to represent.

Housewives can do much to protect themselves if they will make use of this ordinance which has designed to protect them.

If you have old clothing or other wearing apparel that you wish to have turned over to the needy, you can find a ready market for it by calling the Social Service Bureau.

PRESIDENT TO ASK CONGRESS FOR ACTION ON COAL STRIKE

Bills Have Been Gathering Dust In Archives of The Capitol

By HARRY STRINGER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—President Coolidge will make a vigorous demand upon Congress for passage of the Anti-Coal-Strike bill which for two years have been gathering dust in the capitol archives, it was indicated at the White House today, following the passage by the senate of the Copeland resolution urging him to summon operators and miners to a conference to end the strike.

The Copeland resolution was introduced in the senate, 51 to 21, by a Democratic-insurgent coalition before which the administration chiefs crumbled after a week of opposition.

This resolution, adopted in a fire of rankling debate, provides: "Resolved, that the President be requested to invite to the White House at such time as he thinks best the committee of operators and miners, in order that he may urge upon them the national importance of an immediate settlement of the Anthracite Coal Strike."

Senator William M. Butler, chairman of the Republican national committee and the administration spokesman on the bill, was among those who, having twice voted against the resolution, finally yielded under the constantly growing demand for action.

President Coolidge regards the Copeland resolution as a meaningless gesture, probably fruitless of result, it was revealed.

He is expected to reply tardily that two years ago he urged Congress to grant him authority to establish a commission which could place responsibility for a threatened or prolonged strike, arraign public sentiment against the guilty party and be of service in arbitration.

He will give the resolution serious consideration, but will refuse to invite operators and miners to a White House conference, it was indicated by the White House spokesman today.

The attitude of the President, it was asserted, is that he as much as anyone else desires a settlement of the coal strike, and that he would have done something long ago to bring it about if it had been possible. His opinion, it was stated, is that if he mediated in the situation without authority it would only make matters worse.

Senator Copeland made a dramatic appeal for adoption of his resolution, citing instances of suffering from cold and starvation which he attributed to the strike.

Opposition to the resolution was expressed by Senator Borah of Idaho, who declared: "We are passing on to the President a task which amounts to nothing. It gives him no power and the only effect can be obtained by the moral influence of the executive. We are advising the President to do what we think he ought to do but which the President thinks he ought not to do. I would prefer to ask the operators and miners to meet with a committee of the senate."

SUMMER WHITE HOUSE IS TO BE ABANDONED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Abandonment of the "Summer White House" at Swampscott, Mass., was announced at the White House today.

It was declared that the President has other plans for the coming summer and will not return to White Court.

The announcement came as a surprise as President Coolidge was supposed to have been delighted with the Massachusetts town as a retreat during the hot months.

The President expects to be out of the city during the summer but he has made no "definite plans" for a prolonged absence, it was stated.

It also was said that he does not intend to visit Plymouth, Vt., where his father is seriously ill in the near future unless his condition becomes worse.

Frank W. Stearns, the President's adviser, has visited the elder Coolidge twice in the past week and reported him to be resting easily and in excellent spirits. The President also talks to him almost daily over the telephone.

Decision Forbids the Use of Edible Fish For Fertilizers

(By Universal Service)
SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 9.—Decision of the district court of appeals far reaching in its effect upon the sardine canning industry of the State of California was announced here today by A. Zellerbach, chairman of the California state fish and game commission, under the terms of which fish tenders are forbidden to use edible fish in their reduction plant as in the past.

The decision was the result of action brought by sardine canners of San Pedro harbor, and declared that the sardine act of 1925, which gives canners producing canned sardines in 1 pound oval cans, the right to make into fertilizer 1-4 of the capacity of their plant, is discriminatory in that it does not give the same privilege to the packers using smaller or different size cans.

Federal Government Has Taken Hand in Case Secretary Kellogg Reports

(By Universal Service)

SAN DIEGO, Feb. 9.—Shame that came to the house of Thomas Petet, and subsequently caused four members, two of them attractive girls, to enter a suicide pact will never be revealed. The one remaining member of the family who was snatched from death when officers broke into the residence, died this afternoon. Clyde Petet, the 26-year-old daughter, authorities had hoped, would be able to tell the circumstances surrounding the Cirajuna affair, which resulted in the drugging of her sister and of her father, and of their abduction and of the event that immediately claimed the life of her mother and sister. Simultaneously with the information that Clyde had died came instruction from Washington to the coroner, to proceed with all vigor investigating the misfortune of the Petet family.

Secretary of State Kellogg announced that the federal department had started an investigation and that the government will demand punishment for those responsible for the sordid occurrence.

Mexican officials of Tijuana, continued with the co-operation which they had given immigration authorities and San Diego county investigators. Louis Amador, proprietor of the Oakland bar at Old Town, Tijuana, in which the two Petet daughters and their father declared they were drugged will soon be in the custody of American officers, it was announced. Amador is known to have been a fugitive from American justice during the three years he has operated in the Mexican border community. SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 9.—The entire east bay district has been aroused over the disappearance of three 12-year-old girls, two of them missing since last Saturday. FIVE BANDITS ARE CAPTURED BY CITIZENS

ONE BANDIT IS KILLED

Two Other Bandits are Wounded as They Battle With Vigilantes

(By Universal Service)

CLINTON, Iowa, Feb. 8.—Out-shooting five bandits the vigilantes committee of Chadwick effected the capture late today of 5 gunmen fleeing from officials here, one of the bandits was killed, one had his jaw shot away, a third was wounded in the leg and two others were captured and are in jail here. Harry Marx of Chicago, who was killed and Henry Joe Williams of Chicago, pal of Al Fairfield, and Frank Pawley, swooped down today, and at the point of guns, rescued the latter pair from officials just after they had been sentenced to 25 years each for robbing a Chicago and North Western payroll.

The five men jumped into an automobile and drove away. A volley of bullets failed to take effect. Telephone calls were sent to all towns between Clinton and Chicago to be on the lookout for them.

In Chadwick, 26 miles away, Roy A. Hartman, manager of the telephone exchange received the call. He grabbed his rifle and ran down the street looking for men to go with him. A druggist, banker and attorney responded. The town was in an uproar when they saw four men running down the street. Ward Webster, standing near his automobile and agreed to meet the gunmen. He was unarmed.

The community was shocked when all six regulations were broken by the vigilantes. Then the volley of shots was heard in the town. It developed that the gunmen had opened fire and that the windshield of the car had been shot away. The vigilantes dropped behind boulders and stomach behind trees and fought the bandits. Marx fell during the early part of the battle. His death seemed to take the morale out of the bandits. Then Henry Williams dropped. Then Joe Williams was stopped with a bullet in his leg. There was nothing for the rest to do but to surrender.

Freeman was third mate on the ill-fated schooner Yosemite that sank with a cargo of dynamite outside the Golden Gate early yesterday. The Yosemite's crew narrowly escaped with their lives a few hours before when they were rescued after a hectic battle with the elements.

Today while crossing a downtown street Freeman was struck by an automobile. At the Emergency hospital his injuries were reported as serious.

MOVEMENTS AND THE PRESS

In the United States, more than in any country in the world, there has been made evident the power of the press for the advancement of specific causes. One publication, for instance, has made better health for babies its special endeavor has sponsored the collection of funds for suffering peoples of the Near East. The cost of erecting the statue of Liberty in New York Harbor was covered by contributions from the American people collected through the efforts of the New York World.

It is true that the managements of the publishing houses of such periodicals do not suffer by sponsoring a cause; it serves the purpose of giving their magazines and newspapers a distinct function and in course of time a reputation of which they may well be proud. But this is a secondary advantage affecting but comparatively few persons.

The American people should be proud of this unique feature in their magazines and newspapers. It is distinctly their own idea, since each venture has started with one or two individuals, and the support which readers and subscribers give to these various causes shows that this sort of leadership is a kind which they are ready to follow. In years to come the press and people alike will realize more and more the possibilities of initiating other new movements making for the progress of mankind.

AMERICAN POLICE SYSTEM

Although the most hopeful method of fighting so-called "crime waves" appears to be in educational lines, yet for drastic treatment the police service is indispensable, and all means of improving the efficiency of such service are highly to be commended.

One feature of American population admittedly makes policing America a more difficult problem than that in continental countries. This is the diversity of nationalities living in close proximity. While London, for instance, needs for the most part to deal only with English criminals, New York must struggle with an unwieldy group of immigrants. Otherwise the policing task of the various countries is practically a common one.

"Crime waves" are a proof of a weak police system. The trouble lies in a lack of co-ordination of parts of the system. One of the main departments of Scotland Yard is devoted solely to the investigation of the records of those who desire to purchase firearms. Every branch of the police system in France is made aware of criminal procedure in any part of the country. Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Peru, Paraguay and Uruguay recently signed a police covenant together which might well be copied by the United States.

Some Pages from American History

By VICTOR MORGAN

A NEW COLONY IS PLANTED

You have heard how the Pilgrims were persecuted in England and came to this country for freedom and for peace. And you have heard how the Quakers came here to free themselves from cries of "Heresy!"

But you must not think that all the colonists who came to America came because they were ill-treated or because they were of a different religion from that of the king.

People who loved novelty and adventure began coming here because of the thrilling tales they heard of Indian fights and sudden wealth to be found.

The state that we call Maryland had already been included in the Virginia grant, but the king didn't mind granting the same land to two different people upon different occasions. The boundary lines were so very uncertain and the king so far from the scene of action that he found that he could "get away" with this sort of thing rather nicely. Perhaps he didn't even know what he was doing, since true careful maps were almost unknown.

Lord Baltimore sent colonists to form a new Maryland colony. At that time Maryland was a part of England and the colony was named for her.

The place chosen for the colony was a high bluff overlooking the splendid Potomac. The feeling in Virginia ran high against the new colonists. They thought them to be trespassers on land that was really a part of Virginia. At the same time, perhaps they felt regret that they had never planted a settlement on so promising a piece of ground.

And the newcomers had come to stay. They spread out and multiplied. Their friends and perhaps their neighbors followed them over to the new land.

When they had first landed they had come upon an Indian village. The wigwams were set along little paths for streets and there were cornfields in the clearings. The Marylanders had an eye for business. The men sought the Indian chiefs of the village and drove a good bargain. They bought the entire village as it stood.

So the Indians packed their blankets and their gay dresses, strapped their paddles to their backs and went off to build a new village farther back in the forests.

SYNOPSIS

Stephen Renfro, efficiency expert, or college, becomes a boarder at the home of Mrs. Parker, where Molly Shannon is boarding. The girl is of the "shiftless Shannons," of northern Texas, but is now a sophomore at the State University, having won a scholarship. For the first time in her life Molly becomes interested in a man. When suddenly she is called home to attend her father's funeral, Mrs. Parker mysteriously raises the money for the journey.

Molly stared, gasped, then jumped up with a pair of unfinished trousers hanging from one arm and kissed Cynthia with all her heart. "Oh, I am glad!" she said. "Jo's a fine, dependable boy, and we need him in the family. He'll be such a help to mother. How stupid I was not to guess!"

Cynthia kissed her back, looking shamefaced and relieved, and understood what the doubt in her mother's eyes had meant. She smiled to herself and touched worshipfully for the hundredth time a crisp new letter inside her blouse. It had come that morning. It was kind, sympathetic, paternal, humorous, big-brotherly all in one, so much like the writer he might almost have spoken to her from three hundred miles away. There had been others, too—each a friendly little nudge line sounding her dark ocean depths.

"Cynthia wants to show you her things," Mrs. Shannon added. She too was plainly relieved. She was quite shrewd enough to know that, while a woman may not want a man herself, she can still be very much averse to any one else's having him.

Molly looked surprised as Cynthia went quickly to the old tin

the jealousy and bitterness of years. She had loved Jo all her life—and hated Molly for making him appear stupid and ridiculous. "Besides, you didn't have to have your precious old university, did you? You went off and left us to shift the best we could while you had it fine and easy. And now you come back thinking you're too good to wipe your feet on the rest of us—talking about negroes..."

"Girls—girls!" Mrs. Shannon exploded, terrified at the hornet's nest she had pulled down unwittingly about her ears.

But Molly's anger had flared down before this stunning revelation of what was in her sister's heart. Cynthia had been always the gentlest and most docile of creatures; the only one of the brood, indeed, who had never openly resented the too often domineering tactics of the self-appointed mentor. "I'm sorry," Molly said tonelessly, as she turned again to the machine. "I shouldn't have spoken as I did, of course. I had no idea you felt like that..."

That night, before she went to bed, Molly wrote in an old notebook, under a heading already commented on at considerable length:

Poverty blunts all the delicacy, destroys all the beauty of human relations. Being poor together comes to the same thing as being savages together. It makes people snarl and snap and fly at one another's throats. It leaves no distances, no reserves, no nuances.

It was those seasons of poverty which served as a pad, a silence wall thrust, willy-nilly, into families. It saves them the disaster of finding one

CHAPTER VIII

Molly was to stay on at Mrs. Parker's for the coming session. She could earn part of her board and thus have more money to send home. There were other reasons, too, of course—nameless, yet breath-taking reasons. She came back a day earlier than she intended, suiting Mrs. Parker's convenience about taking her to the train. The onslaught of students would not begin until the morrow and the campus was almost as deserted as when she left it three weeks before. She walked the mile and a half from the depot, partly to save the car fare, partly because she wanted to greet at her leisure the beloved environs. Here, it seemed to Molly, her real life had begun, and she had felt herself of late so perilously near to losing it.

Mrs. Parker was in the throes of getting things ready for the girls who would be arriving now on every train. But she found time to tell Molly the little that had happened in her absence, while the two ate a quiet supper on the corner of one of the long tables in the empty dining room. The faculty club had reopened the day before, claiming the last of the summer "meatless"—Stephen Renfro included. His name had not been actually mentioned before, and when Molly's face lost perceptibly some of its radiance, the astute little fairy godmother added casually that he never went by without looking in to pass a joke with her.

They were on the front porch, making some show of conversation and both keyed for an unburied footstep on the walk, when he came round the corner—tall, graceful, distinguished in white flannels and dark coat. He swept off his hat with a little extra half-humorous flourish at sight of Molly, whose heart was thumping so painfully she dared not trust herself at first to speak. He shook hands, asked how she was, and settled himself, apparently content, for one of their old-time three-cornered chats. But when Mrs. Parker, making plausible excuse of "all them pesky girls," slipped away, he leaned forward abruptly and took both Molly's hands in his.

"Poor little un," he said in his half-teasing, half-compassionate deep voice, "she's even littler and tinner than when she went away. Soon there'll be nothing left but the mere plans and specifications for a woman!"

"Do you know," he continued, when they were on the "perip"—a line of tree shadow around a shining, silver square of moonlight which was the campus—"if you had stayed away a single minute longer, I should have..."

Molly, who had not dared look at him since the amazing incident, asked mechanically, "What should you have done?"

"Come after you!" he averred in a low growl, glooming down at her with that admixture of the paternal and the lover which she had learned long since to adore. Her heart stood a beat, though, at the notion of him in "Lover" Chapel—in the one room and leather. She turned up to her toes, as on the day when he had criticized the story. "This town has been just about as cheerful as a gr..." He brought up short, gave her a quick look.

"We're always been poor," she went on.

trunk by her mother's bed. She was more surprised when she saw the pile of really beautiful garments lifted adoringly from thick swathings of tissue paper. Soft raincoats and valenines, dainty ribbons and organdies, a silk petticoat—last of all a shimmering white crepe-de-chine wedding dress, with silk stockings and gloves and white kid pumps to match.

"But"—Molly glanced, mystified, from the finery, so out of place in the bare, ugly little room, to her mother—"I don't understand. Surely Aunt Lena—"

When Mrs. Shannon seemed to hesitate, Cynthia spoke up, proudly. "Jo he gave me the money."

"He wanted she should have pretty clothes and—she wanted them, so—it didn't hardly seem right to refuse," her mother amended hurriedly, smoothing and glossing things over, as usual.

For some moments Molly said nothing at all, but she turned very white. The valenine silk dress slipped unnoted from her lap, and Cynthia picked it up and brushed an imaginary smudge resentfully off it. Then Molly got to her feet; her voice shook with passion. "Mother," she said, "how could you—let her?"

She broke off. Another of the old blasting tornadoes had her in its grip. She felt queer and dizzy. Remembering, though, her last humiliation and shame, she fought grimly for self-control. Even at that, the next words were barbed with poison. "We've always been poor," she went on, when she could trust herself to speak, "but at least we haven't been downright—common before. We've never taken anything we didn't have to have. Why, it's no better than the way the negroes do—letting their men buy the wedding clothes for them—let her!"

Cynthia had risen, too, and her face was as white as Molly's. The wedding gown lay on the table between them, limp and inarticulate, like a peace offering spurned. "I'll thank you not to compare Jo and me to negroes," she said. Her voice, despite the tremor, was hard and resentful. It rankled

Lions Club Given Report On Program For Annual Meet

At the meeting of the Lions club yesterday afternoon, reports of committees and matters relating to coming events were taken care of, preceding the program which is a usual and interesting feature of the meeting. Mrs. C. R. Blake submitted the following report on the meeting which she attended last week in San Francisco as a member of a committee appointed by the club to assist on the entertainment committee for the Lion's national convention:

To the Officers and Members Richmond Lions Den, Richmond, Calif.

The second meeting of the Entertaining Committee of the Lions of Lions took place in the Laurel Court, Fairmont Hotel, San Francisco, Calif., Tuesday, Feb. 4th with 26 ladies in attendance representing five Dens of the East Bay Lions.

After a pleasant luncheon hour, the meeting was called to order by Mrs. Johnson of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, who was loaned to us for the occasion, with Dr. Rose Vandenburg as vice-chairman.

At a previous meeting held in December, a rough program was outlined which was then submitted by the chairman subject to additions and eliminations. At all times of the meeting a consensus of opinion was asked for.

We were divided into eleven sections to allow all to participate in the celebration. Final programs of the various events will be submitted to the several Dens for their approval at a later date.

Richmond will be asked to appoint a committee to act as an escort of honor to meet all trains passing through Richmond containing delegates to give them a hearty welcome. Richmond Den has also been asked to entertain the ladies in attendance with a luncheon and sight-seeing trip on Thursday of the week of the convention.

Committees will be appointed to see that all visitors have a bouquet of California flowers in their rooms on their arrival and about the middle of the week to be followed with a basket of California fruit.

The date of our next meeting will be March 11th, 1926 at the Fairmont hotel.

Respectfully submitted by the committee,

Mrs. C. R. Blake, Chairman.

Ladies Entertainment Committee, J. R. Miller, president of the California Manufacturers' association and A. W. Lewis, Berkeley engineer spoke before the club on what they termed "Lancha Plana Project No. 2." They stated that they wanted a complete investigation of the water plans of the East Bay Utility District. They are of the opinion that the site of the Lancha Plana reservoir as at present intended by the Utility District is too low, subjecting the water to a high summer heat.

The chairman of the day was Norman Zoph. Mrs. Clinton Smith, accompanied by Mrs. Irma St. John, entertained with a group of solos. The Lions' quartet rendered several popular songs. President Wilbur Pierce occupied the chair during the business session. February 23 was set aside as Chamber of Commerce day in the Lions club. A. H. MacKinnon will act as chairman on that day.

El Cerrito to Zone Streets For Playgrounds

The Parent-Teachers Association of the Fairmont school made written request to the trustees to have portions of certain streets zoned off during part of Saturday for the children to play on.

Mrs. Marion Wright, corresponding secretary of the P. T. A., stated that the city had no playgrounds and that grounds should be provided for the children to play, and as the city has no money for parks or playgrounds thought that the zoning of streets on Saturday would allow the children to play in safety.

Mayor Frank McDermott appointed trustees, Fred Lutz and George Conlon to act in conjunction with the Parent Teachers Association in locating streets that could be used for playgrounds and are to report back to the board next Monday night.

San Pablo Paving Report Given to El Cerrito Trustees

That the paving of San Pablo from curb to curb through El Cerrito will soon be a reality was the report made by trustee Charles Zimmerman and City Engineer Ross L. Caffee, who attended a meeting with the State Highway commission Monday in San Francisco.

According to the report the highway commission will pave five feet on either side of the present highway and resurface the existing highway. The city of El Cerrito will pave the additional roadway which will be about twelve feet from the county line to Potrero avenue and thirteen feet from Potrero avenue to the northern city limits. The city will also construct curbs and gutters along the entire of San Pablo avenue in El Cerrito.

All the work to be done will be done under the supervision of the city and after the completion the highway commission will pay the city for their share.

The highway commission stated that on the completion of the work the jurisdiction of San Pablo avenue laying in the city limits would be turned over to the city and if the El Cerrito annexes the Richmond Annex, the city would have control over the avenue from the county line to its northern city limits.

Police Chief Thinks Officer Justified In Shooting of Woman

OAKLAND, Feb. 9.—In the eyes of Police Chief James T. Drew, Officer A. H. Sim, who fired the shot that paralyzed Mrs. Ruth Paulucci for life, is cleared of all blame of the tragedy. This is the substance of the report Chief Drew presented to Commissioner Frank Colburn today.

The report was accepted by Colburn without asking further investigation. The condition of Mrs. Paulucci, wife of an Oakland attorney, who is lying at the Berkeley General hospital with three segments of her spinal column shattered and paralyzed from the waist down, was today reported unchanged.

In his report Chief Drew stated that he visited the scene of the shooting and was satisfied that Sim, standing upon the hill, would make the bullet that was intended for the gasoline tank of the car in which Mrs. Paulucci was riding carry higher than he intended.

Drew declared that he was satisfied that Sim was paying close attention to police duty. In his report Drew stated that he felt Sim was justified in the shooting, because of the fact that the driver of the car refused to stop and that there were so many cars gliding and thieves using cars that Sim under the circumstances, did what was right.

GYMNASTIC APES AND POLLIES RUIN WIRES

From Mexico comes a story that monkeys and parrots are very much pleased with the development of the telephone service in that country.

It seems that the monkeys and parrots assume that the development of the service was for their special enjoyment and pleasure. At any rate it is declared that every night after darkness has settled down completely, these wild creatures come out from their haunts and perform all sorts of gymnastics and capers on the wires which have recently been strung into service, with the result that many miles have had to be replaced with heavier cables. Telephone officials had not taken into consideration the monkeys and parrots and the extra strain which they place on the wires.

FOUR R. U. H. S. CAGERS HAVE A HIGH AVERAGE

So far this year four men on the Richmond Union high school basketball team has piled up an astonishing number of points.

Referring to the score book in Coach L. W. Hill's office, we find the following scores for the following men:

Games 10, player Dyer; points 88, average per game, 8 per game. Games 12, player, Villalobos; points 77; average per game, 8. Games 12, player, Barber; points 55; average per game, 4. Games 12, O. Johnson; points 55, average per game 4.

In averaging the points it must be remembered that the men did not play throughout the game in any of the ten or twelve battles.

The scores show that Otto Johnson, the long lanky center, is coming to the fore as a formidable basket shooter. Otto started the season with the first game with two points and from then on he has been dragging down the buckets.

In averaging the points, the practice games with the Santa Fe cagers and the U. C. Pharmacy school has been taken into consideration.

In the 130 pound team, Tittemore, center, is leading the list. The high men for that weight are:

Games 7, Tittemore; points, 49; average per game 7. Games 6, Bowman; points 23; average per game 3. Games 7, Hoskings; points 20; average per game 2.

In the computation of scores and points, when the average was found the fraction of points were not taken.

SUMMERS MAY BE BROUGHT BEFORE JURY

(City Universal Service)
SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 9.—A special session of the county grand jury may be held to investigate the "high finance" activities of Charles P. Summers, former resident of Springfield, Ill., and recently ousted head of the Union indemnity exchange of this city and the seaboard casualty company at Los Angeles.

A shortage of approximately $200,000 has been uncovered in the accounts of the two companies since the alleged disappearance of Summers, according to Charles Detrick, state insurance commissioner.

Although Detrick has sought to locate Summers for questioning, no trace of the insurance man has been found. His attorneys, however, announced that Summers would be available at any time.

Detrick has been appointed by court order to take over the affairs of the two insurance companies.
